

International Law Section / Inter-American Affairs Committee
Presents a Luncheon Program

Corruption and Business in Latin America: A Lethal Cocktail

Quite frequently investors complain that corruption is a serious deterrent to doing business in Latin America. Our panel of distinguished speakers will discuss the problems that arise from the combination of corruption and business in Latin America. They will explore how dramatic corruption is in the region and what efforts are being implemented to combat it, such as the Organization of American States (OAS) Convention. We will also hear how some corporations have been able to do business and protect themselves from corruption. Lastly our panel will discuss the U.S. legal implications of corruption, specifically the FCPA (Foreign Corrupt Practice Act) and the new UN Convention Against Corruption
